

The title is surrounded by several stylized butterflies in shades of orange, yellow, and red. Some are positioned above the text, some below, and some to the sides, creating a whimsical border.

The Fairy
That
Lost Her Wings

By Elizabeth Jack

The Fairy

That

Lost Her Wings

By Elizabeth Jack

SoftQUALM
Press

It was early Spring in fairyland and little Francesca who was the youngest of all the fairies was still fast asleep in bed.

Outside the day was just beginning, the sun had just risen above the tall trees and the forest birds were beginning to twitter and whistle; it was going to be a beautiful day.

Francesca opened her eyes and gave a huge smile as she remembered that this was her first day at fairy school.

She jumped out of bed and quickly got dressed and headed for the kitchen where her Mummy was making breakfast for the rest of the family.

She took her place at the table and started to eat her breakfast.

Soon it was time to leave for school; she packed her little bag and followed her big sister Veronica to school.

Eventually they arrived at school. Francesca was so excited as she had waited a long time for this day. Now she was going to be a proper fairy.

Once inside the classroom Francesca was told to take her seat with the rest of the new fairies. She looked round, saw an empty seat and quickly sat down.

As soon as the class was settled Mrs Wiggins, the teacher introduced herself. Francesca couldn't believe how pretty she was; she had long red hair which was perfectly tied on top of her head, sparkling green eyes and a wonderful smile.

Francesca noticed that she had on the most beautiful dress she had ever seen. It was pink with thousands of sparkling gems that twinkled and glistened as she moved; Francesca was amazed by her.

*An enchanting tale of an unfortunate little fairy
Who loses her wings and her desperate search for them.*

This is a simple story aimed at younger children with a vivid imagination

Written and Illustrated by Elizabeth Jack

Soft QUALM
Press

ISBN 978-1-906972-02-8

£9.99 UK
€13.99 EU
$17.99 US